Immature Young Leader

Being Rahul Gandhi must not be easy. It is not easy being born into such wealth and privilege. It is not easy being the scion of India's first family. And it is definitely not easy when you decide that you want to become a public personality. Make no mistakes, despite the stories of 'poor Rahul' being forced into doing something he does not want to do, there is enough evidence to the contrary: That Congress vice president Rahul Gandhi wants to be a politician and that he wants to lead the Indian National Congress like his mother, father, uncle, grandmother and great-grandfather before him. That said, his forebears knew it is not easy being a politician, particularly in a country so vast as India. And being a politician involves a lot of interaction with the public, after all the public votes for you. On that front, Rahul Gandhi has taken large strides as a politician over the past few years. His ideas and public speaking might remain weak and his party cadre gutted, but he is not down for the count as yet. Yet, he must keep his father and grandmother's tragic deaths in mind when he goes out in public. Whether it is to meet the voting public and raise issues like a responsible Opposition politician or when he travels abroad for some downtime. There is no doubt that Rahul Gandhi is entitled to his private life and to enjoy himself as every individual is. But he cannot do either thing at the cost of his personal security. He has chosen this path for himself, unlike many children of prominent politicians in other democracies. Part of the price that he has to pay for having chosen this path is constant protection whether in India or abroad. The Special Protection Group security must seem stifling at times and Rahul Gandhi's complaints about the armoured cars being stuffy probably do have an element of truth. Yet, his recklessness with his security detail is unbecoming of him and while many other public personalities, such as film actors and sports persons, can enjoy a degree of anonymity abroad, the same cannot apply here, as unlike them, Rahul Gandhi is protected on the public exchequer.

The simple fact is that there are threats to the lives of most of India's top politicians today from both internal and external forces and the same applies doubly so to Rahul Gandhi — one of the two most important people in the Opposition. If an attack were to happen, his party would waste no time to blame the Union Government as they have done with the recent stone-pelting incident in Gujarat. And while the Gujarat Government must bring the perpetrators to book, Rahul Gandhi's callous attitude towards his personal security is rightly being highlighted.

Flavoured table spreads - a tastier and healthier alternative to butter

Ahmedabad, Urban India has been facing a serious conundrum for a long time now. Short deadlines, long haul flights, late nights, early mornings, frequent eating out and rare balanced diets are all taking a toll on the health aspirations of today's jet-setters. For most people, lack of time seems to be the biggest defence against eating healthy and exercising. However, unless one stops making busy schedules an excuse for poor health, they should be ready to face an onslaught of lifestyle diseases.

A startling report by the National Family Health Survey recently revealed that the number of obese people in India have doubled in the past decade. It also stated that a large number of the urban population was found to have high Body Mass Index (BMI). Higher the BMI, greater is a person's risk for conditions like heart disease, high blood pressure, type 2 diabetes and certain forms of cancer. Cardiovascular diseases are also witnessing an alarming rise in the country, especially among the young population. Unhealthy lifestyle compounded by high stress levels and poor diets have all contributed to this declining physical fitness. A survey by healthcare platform Practo showed a growth of 40 per cent in cardiologist appointments with hypertension as the most common symptom. Most of these appointments were booked by people in the age group of 25 to 35 years.

These studies are evidence of what the demanding schedules of modern lives are doing to our health. It is time to make a change and contrary to popular beliefs, a healthier lifestyle isn't that hard to achieve.

PM's remarks during the welcome of Vice President M. Venkaiah Naidu, in the Rajya Sabha

The Prime Minister, Shri Narendra Modi, today joined the members of the Rajya Sabha, in welcoming Vice President Shri M. Venkaiah Naidu, as Chairman of the House. The Prime Minister began his welcome remarks by recalling that today, 11th August, was the day when a young revolutionary of the freedom struggle, Shri Khudiram Bose, was hanged by the British. He said that the event reminds us of the sacrifice of those who fought for freedom, and the responsibility that this places on all of us. The Prime Minister said that Shri Venkaiah Naidu is the first Vice President born in Independent India. He added that Shri Naidu has long experience, and is well-versed in the intricacies of Parliamentary procedures.

Recalling his long association with Shri Venkaiah Naidu, the Prime Minister said Shri Naidu is always sensitive to the requirements of the rural areas, the poor and the farmers, and his inputs on these issues have been of immense value. The Prime Minister said that the fact that people from humble, rural background, today occupy the highest positions in India, shows the maturity of Indian democracy, and the strength of India's Constitution.
